Definition of the Qualifications of the Members of the Degree Examination Committee

The formation of a Degree Examination Committee (three to five members for a Master's Degree Examination Committee; five to nine members for a Doctoral Degree Examination Committee):

(1) Any faculty member or academician at Academia Sinica whose position level meets the requirements for the members of a postgraduate degree examination committee:

A. Qualification for a member of a Master's Degree Examination Committee: A member must be "a current or former full professor, associate professor, or assistant professor; an academician at Academia Sinica, a current or former Academia Sinica research fellow, associate research fellow, or assistant research fellow."

B. Qualification for a member of a Doctoral Degree Examination Committee: A member must be "a current or former full professor or associate professor; an academician at Academia Sinica, a current or former Academia Sinica research fellow, or associate research fellow."

(2) Having a doctoral degree and significant academic accomplishments:

A Master's or Doctoral Degree Examination Committee must select and appoint members "having a doctoral degree and significant academic accomplishments." The criteria for selecting such committee members and recognizing the appointment qualification for such committee members should be stipulated at the affairs meetings of each department, graduate institute, college, or degree program at National Central University.

(3) Having expertise in an unusual or highly specialized academic research field:

A Master's or Doctoral Degree Examination Committee must select and appoint members "having expertise in an unusual or highly specialized academic research field and having achieved significant results in his or her academic or professional field." The criteria for selecting such committee members and recognizing the appointment qualification for such committee members should be stipulated at the affairs meetings of each department, graduate institute, college, or degree program at National Central University.
